JOB MARKET PAPER	"Wrong Place, Wrong Time: The Long-Run Effects of In-Utero Exposure to Malaria on Educational Attainment in Brazil" I investigate the long-term relationship between early life exposure to malaria and human capital outcomes in Brazil. The identification strategy relies on exogenous variation in the risk of malaria outbreaks in different states and seasons of the year to identify early life exposure according to the timing and location of birth. Furthermore, Brazil has undergone a successful campaign of malaria eradication during the late 1950s, which allows for comparing outcomes of birth cohorts born just prior to and just after eradication to identify the extent of in utero exposure. I find negative treatment effects on the number of years of education and primary completion rates and the effects are stronger for exposure during the first trimester of intrauterine life.
